The survey conducted by YouTrend speaks clearly: the vast majority of citizens looks favourably at Fiumicino Development Plan. According to LUISS estimates, the €9 billion investment planned by ADR would guarantee a positive short-term impact with over 50,000 jobs, and in the long term could be strategic both from an environmental standpoint (with the creation of a large archaeological park and the expansion of green areas) and through the delivery of long-awaited compensatory works that are essential for managing tourist flows. It is therefore important that ENAC and the Government move quickly on the approval so that the project can proceed to its next phases.
